The Russian foreign ministry has warned the West against complacency and insisted that Russia is ready to fight for Syria with all means. "The foreign ministry strongly warns against any kind of complacency. Russia is ready to use all possible means in order to defend the legitimate interests of the country and its population," the ministry said in a statement on Saturday. Moscow "is confident of achieving its security goals in Syria" by using all possible means, including military ones, Russia's foreign ministry said, adding that the Syrian government forces "must not and shall not be defeated." The alliance said it had destroyed five armoured vehicles in the retaliatory strike. The ministry's statement stressed that the Russian leadership is "prepared for any scenario, including full-scale military and civil confrontation." If the US and its allies remain absent from the negotiating table, "the initiative is transferred to the Syrian government. It is we who now have the right to ask for an agenda," the statement said. "There should be no illusions or illusions," the statement added. "Any alternative is unacceptable to us. Any negotiations must be conducted on an equal and equal basis, on the terms that we demand. And we demand that Russia, as the foreign military power, must leave the Syrian territory for the duration of the negotiations."
